Salvador Mestre, to be attorney-ceneral for Porto Rico, Nominated March 23, 1920.

More recently the president has sent in several nominations which should not have required more than a day or so of delay. For instance, the nomination of Alex O. King, of Georgia, now solicitor-general of the United States, to be circuit judge of the Fifth judicial circuit. This nomination went in April 29 and although the nominee has been serving as solicitor-general of the United States, and his qualifications are known to the senate because of the prior confirmation, the judgeship confirmation is still in committee.

Nominations of James Duncan, of Massachusetts, and Henry James Ford of Princeton, N. J., to be members of the interstate commerce commission, were sent in May 4, but have not been considered, despite the urgency for a full commission, Mark W. Potter, of New York, was nominated for the remaining commission vacancy on May 8.

A typical method of partisan senate procedure was shown recently in the case of Bainbridge Colby, now secretary of state. The Colby nomination was held up from Feb. 25 to March 22, while the foreign relations committee investigated baseless rumors and charges whispered to a member of the senate. When the charges were disproved and it was found that the investigation was both an injustice to Mr. Colby and a waste of time, the committee reported it out and the senate tried to make amends by quick action on the committee report. death.
